Temples of Paestum

Paestum contains a wealth of works and monuments of unimaginable value (historical and otherwise). Let's start by saying that Paestum is surrounded by a wall (which extends for about 4.75 km) and that it has gates located at the cardinal points. There is no shortage of points of interest: first of all we have the temples (in Doric style, as well as perfect examples of Magna Graecia, dedicated to Hera, Athena and Poseidon) which have miraculously reached us in excellent condition. Then there is the Gaudio necropolis, one of the largest necropolises of Paestum (think that it extends for over 2000 square meters). There is also an important museum that contains numerous collections of works of various kinds. First of all the grave goods (such as vases, weapons and Greek and Lucanian frescoed tomb slabs) of the aforementioned necropolis. An excellent example of Greek painting of the classical age of Magna Graecia could be found in the famous Tomb of the Diver (480-470 BC) with a cultured representation of the transition from life to the realm of the dead.

CASTELLABATE CITY

The historic center of Castellabate, included in the Cilento and Vallo di Diano National Park, is recognized by UNESCO as a “World Heritage Site” under the Man and Biosphere program. Let’s start from this fact – which recognizes the profound value of this “Cultural Landscape” rich in memories and artistic and natural assets – to discover the village, which still preserves its medieval urban structure. Narrow streets, alleys, arches, short flights of steps, buildings, open spaces and interconnected houses where gray stone dominates, chase each other without interruption, now turning their backs on the intense light now opening onto the green of the slope that slopes down towards the shining sea, stained only by the banks of posidonia, in one of the most suggestive corners of the Cilento coast. The beauty of the coast and the clarity of the waters have allowed the territory of Castellabate, which overlooks the sea with the populous center of Santa Maria and the smaller one of San Marco, to obtain the Blue Flag, the Four Sails and the recognitions of Legambiente.

ACCIAROLI CITY

Acciaroli, Pioppi and Pollica: a triangle of wonders in Cilento.

On the suggestive coast of Cilento, which overlooks the Tyrrhenian Sea, stand three enchanting gems: Acciaroli, Pioppi and Pollica. Acciaroli, with its picturesque seaside village, transforms into a lively center during the tourist season, attracting visitors from every corner of the world. This charming seaside resort has been awarded the prestigious "5 sails" by Legambiente and the Blue Flag by virtue of its renowned beaches. Pioppi, an ancient fishing village, stands out for its authenticity and the tranquility of its pebble beach, lapped by crystal-clear waters. Here, time seems to pass more slowly, allowing you to enjoy traditional cuisine based on fresh fish. The Living Museum of the Sea and the Mediterranean Diet, located inside the suggestive Palazzo Vinciprova, in Pioppi, carefully preserves archaeological finds and evidence of the maritime life of the area. This fascinating museum not only tells the story of the sea and local fishermen, but also promotes the healthy lifestyle and typical nutrition of the Mediterranean diet.
