

“TOUR TEMPLES OF PAESTUM”

ANOTHER WORLD IS POSSIBLE

... is the essence of archaeology and historical anthropology, and of Paestum in particular. By discovering the architecture, art, rites, and culture of ancient Greece – a world so distant from our way of living and thinking – we can realize the variety of human life throughout history.

When, in the 18th century, the first travelers visited the site of Paestum, they did not know what to think of the Doric temples, of their severe and archaic style. But it is precisely the otherness of these buildings, and of the community that built them, that is the basis of the fascination that the Magna Graecia site has exerted ever since.

The amazement experienced by eighteenth-century travellers in front of the testimonies of the classical world was destined to be repeated up to the present: the sculptural frieze of the first temple of Hera on the Sele river, the Tomb of the Diver, the bronze vases from the Heroon... works exhibited today in the museum that question and irritate the observer, speaking of a bygone world, "totally alien" to our gaze, as Johann Wolfgang Goethe wrote. A world, however, that also reserves a message for the future: the variety of forms of life, art, politics, thought, love that we find in history, demonstrates: another world is possible.
